Conference Description
The thoracic session of the 8th Annual Fall Midwest Thoracic & GI Oncology Conference will address many of the issues arising in the diagnosis, treatment and management of lung cancer. The conference will include: a review of the new guidelines for managing lung nodules, side by side histologic correlation of identified tumors, specifics related to the integration of PET scan findings, strategies for obtaining tissue adequate for diagnosis, staging and mutational analysis and the role of photodynamic therapy.

The GI session will focus on educating health care providers in the changing patterns of cancer epidemiology, updates in screening options, development of new diagnostic modalities and treatment as it pertains to gastrointestinal cancer.

Conference Objectives
At the conclusion of this conference, the participant should be better able to:

Thoracic:
• Implement the new Fleischner Society guidelines in the management of ground glass nodules
• Identify the options available for utilizing radiation therapy for patients in all stages of lung cancer
• Recognize the pathology that is associated with specific radiographic findings
• Develop a comprehensive approach in obtaining a tissue diagnosis and staging of lung cancer
• Incorporate the use of mutational analysis of lung cancers into the selection of corresponding treatment agents
• Discuss surgical options for minimizing the extent of surgical resection using bronchoplastic techniques
• Recognize treatment options for patients with oligometastatic disease and for patients with bony metastases
• Explore the utilization of photodynamic therapy in the treatment of thoracic malignancies

GI:
• Describe the role of endoscopic surveillance and intervention in the management of patients with Barrett’s metaplasia
• Discuss the role of surgical management for patients with gastrointestinal stromal tumors and pancreatic neuroendocrine tumors
• Differentiate the new biologic therapies for colon cancer and their appropriate use in the management of colon cancer
• Analyze the controversies involved in the management of liver resection for metastatic colorectal cancer
• Evaluate the role of radiation therapy in the management of patients with locally advanced pancreatic adenocarcinoma

Target Audience
Physicians, radiation oncologists, nurse practitioners, physician assistants, nurses, and respiratory therapists in the specialties of cardiothoracic surgery, gastroenterology, oncology, radiation oncology, pulmonology, surgery and internal medicine.
Registration Information
Thoracic Session: $80               GI Session: $80                 Full Conference: $100
There is no registration fee for UNMC students/residents with verification of full-time status from supervisor.

The registration fee includes the educational conference, continuing education credit and all related conference meals and refreshment breaks.
