Many student-run clinics are unique in the way they operate, fundraise, and recruit students and faculty. There is also a lot of research done at student-run clinics that provides valid information about the health care status of people around the country. At the SHARING the Vision conference we would like to provide an opportunity for schools with student-run clinics to present their best practices and/or any research that they have done relating to student-run clinics and the populations they serve.

These presentations will provide students/faculty who currently work at a clinic at their school or who would like to start a clinic at their school with valuable insight into the many different ways that student-run clinics can be managed. These presentations will also give students and faculty the opportunity to present the aspects of their clinics of which they are most proud or any research related to student-run clinics that they have obtained to a national audience.

BONUS

All of those students or groups of students who are chosen to present in a break-out session at the conference will be refunded their $75 conference fee. Please limit groups to 3 students per topic. Faculty members are also invited to submit presentations, although their conference fee will not be refunded. All presenters will have access to smart boards for power point presentations if desired.

TIMELINE

October 15, 2008
Deadline for submission of a brief description (300 words or less) of either the best practice or the research topic that you are interested in presenting to a small group of students/faculty at the conference. A form for submission can be filled out at the SHARING the Vision website at http://app1.unmc.edu/SHARING/conference.html

November 15, 2008
Selection Confirmation (12 – 24 presenters will be selected based on projected conference attendance)

February 15, 2009
Deadline for submission of final presentation outline (to be included in the information packet given to all conference attendees and posted on the web). You will receive specific guidelines for the submission of this item with your selection confirmation.

All submissions can be made online at http://app1.unmc.edu/sharing/conference.html

CONTINUING EDUCATION CREDIT

After attending the SHARING the Vision conference, students and faculty of medicine, physician assistant, pharmacy, physical therapy and all other allied health fields should be able to:

1. Identify the strengths and weaknesses of the student-run clinics in which they currently work or which they are currently opening.
2. List several strategies used to addresses the unique challenges of managing a student-run clinic that have been proven to work in student-run clinics across the United States.
3. Apply these strategies to the challenges they face in their own student-run clinics or in their work to open their own student-run clinics.
4. List the contact information of students from other schools, disciplines and areas of the country who are facing similar challenges in opening/running a student-run clinic.
